Having and to care for a number of children and grandchildren who are charged to his support. The case is one that is calculated to appeal to the sympathics of every well disposed person; but, in spite of appearances, the old man deserves no help nor sympathy. Last week he circulated a subscription paper for the same purpose; collected fifty or sixty dollars, and loafed about the low saloons of the city, until he made way with every dollar of the money. Recovering from his spree, and finding himself penniless, he is abroad with a new subscription paper, and, if our citizens again place him' in funds, it will not be postribution in sid of the objects se, forth in his paper; but toward the pur-chase of whisky to keep him drunk a week

NICHOLAS PRITH, UNDERTAKER. We invite general attention to the card of Mr. Nicholas Petth, undertaker, etc. Mr. Feith has a large stock of goods in his line, and will always be found prepared to fill orders, whether for the finest medallion cases or the cheapest wooden coffin, at prices far below those at which such articles have heretofore been sold in Cairo. For particulars see card. Mr. Feith is a practical mechanic, and fully understands his business. He has a splendid hearse, and will, on short notice, attend funerals anywhere in the city or immediate vi-

He also has a stock of toys, confectious, etc., that is worthy of the attention of those wishing to please and gratify the little ones.

A PERILOUS LEAP .- We hear that railroad engineer while asleep in the secin the act of running off the track into deep rocky ditch. To arise from his bed. frantically rush to the open window and leap to the platform, about sixteen feet below, was the work of only an instant. The bly shook up; but, aside from that, the chief damage was inflicted upon the platform-the board upon which he alighted being crushed down and broken as if it had been glass. The "locomotive" wasn't hurt a particle.

THE American Odd Fellow for the current month has among its interesting contents many valuable articles, including the following: Eight Bells; Hebrew Poetry; Art of Living Happily; An Odd Fellow Abroad; Scientific and Curious Facts; Out of Work: Oriental Sketches: Temples of Pekin; Odd Fellow Gems; Humors of the Day; Leaves from a Rover's Life-Log; The Germans; Ladies Olio. Youth's Department, &c., &c. Published by the American Odd Fellow Association, No. 96 Nassau street, New York. $1.25 per volume, or $2.50 per year.

THE CITY SHOR STORE .- The City Shoe Store, corner of Eighth and Commercial, presents unusual attractions just now. A full supply of ladies', misses' and children's shoes has just been received, and is offered to the public, and especially to patrons, at very low prices. "A large stock of ladies? fancy goods, including hair rats, coils and pade, has also been received, and is deserving the especial attention of the ladies. A fine stock of gentlemen's custom work shoes always on hand at ngures that cannot fail to give entire satisfaction.

THE ODD FELLOW.-The little Cairo steamer Old Fellow, has, during the past fow weeks, been undergoing repairs and alterations-receiving a new coat of paint and a general overhauling that makes her look like what she is-a new boat. She left for Memphis this morning with a carwill open the Central Meat Market, next go of ice. a Cairo business man who has proven the virtue of well applied printer's ink, united with personal energy and industry, no name becomes more prominent than that of C. R. Woodward, the proprietor of the "Novelty Iron Works"-one of the largest and best stocked iron stores in the

Mr. Woodward located in Cairo about nine years ago, and is one of the comparatively few extensive business men of Southern Lilinois, who have successfully passed all the business and fluorelal changes and transitions of the intervening period. He discharges and cramp like magic. You established a new branch of business here encountering at the outset, the labor of concentrating a tende that, from necessity, was divided between Paducah, Evansville Louisville, St. Louis and Cincinnati; and further, the disadvantage of being the only representative of his department of business in the city. His energy and tact made him equal to the emergency, however, and, before three months had classed, he was full-handed with business, and had assured all that scope of country that looks to Cairo as a source of supply, that "The Novelty Iron Works was a permanent and successful fixture of the city, and entirely worthy of patron-

The loss of his "war patronage" was abundantly compensated by the removal of restrictions on trade with the South. Among the first and most enterprising of those who entered that territory, he sought to deserve the patronage of its people; and, if any man doubts his success, let fine young Kentucky full-blood horse, him make inquiry at any of the towns our country.

Like many other Cairo business men. Mr. Woodward passed through an ordeal of fire. His splendid brick store house gain, the inestimable blessing of health is and his stock in trade, of an aggregate too often forgotten, until disease is firmly value of $60,000 or $70,000, become involved in one of the great conflagrations that have told so terribly upon the presthe vulnerable point in most persons, and perity of Cairo, and in a single night. were reduced to a shapeless and worthless | pervious and indestructible. mass of rains. A few days ago we passed through this building, and viewed, with surprise, the vast quantities of goods with which its three tell stories are stocked. The cellar, or basement story, is devoted to oils, nails, wagon hule, wagon timber, felloes, etc. We can safely say that there were no less than twenty-five cords of hubs, felloes, etc., on hand; a thousand kegs of nails, and as much oil as will be called for in five years. The second story is devoted to bar iron and steel (of which there were certainly hundreds of tons) leather and rubher belting in vast abundance; builders' bardware, edge tools; nuts and screws by the ton; brass fadeets, stop-cocks, whistles, and the thousand and one articles, in that country creates a demand.

These occupied every available foot of the floor, and the space to the joists above-standing cord on cord, overtowering piles-enough, seemingly, to supply the demand of everybody always ! To our exclamation of surprise : "Good gracious : What do you intend to do with so much stuff?" we were coolly informed that it "was nothing-the trade required it, and that the stock was not as full as he in tended to make it."

Were we to devote every line of our reading space to that end, we should fail to convey an adequate idea of the provision Mr. Woodward has made for the business in his line.
